

Let's start with the things that are completely irrelevant, even though you might think that are important... I have a degree in Computer Science and have just started doing a PhD in the same thing. I have also been programming for more years than I can count (I know, you couldn't tell this from looking at me – that's why I'm perfect for this position ;)).

On a slightly more serious note, I have been an IT officer for another society for a couple of years now, so I'm sure I'd be able to take good care of our little website, Facebook page and even the (weekly) emails, if that is required.

On an even more serious note, in addition to what I've said before, we might even be able to add some new features or have a bit of a redesign of the MCR website, if people want that/I find someone to help me out.

Oh, and as for the communication part, I am fluent in two languages, could survive with another two and I'm learning the fifth one (I'm sure you were dying to know that!). And if you have met me/seen me around, you know I have some communication skills too.

What more could you want from a Communications Officer? ;)

P.S. I know the second photo is not of me, but I love my cat and I know that people love cute photos of cats, so here you are ;)
